

Lintec opens new extension to flagship laboratory

In response to increased demand from ship owners and ship managers, UK based Lintec Testing Services Ltd has extended its laboratory in Darlington.

The new facility will allow Lintec to cope with increased demand for both routine analysis and additional investigative analysis.

Geoff Jones, Lintec's General Manager commented "we have seen a large increase in the number of vessels on our programme as more and more ship owners and ship managers use our service. Consequently the number of samples we handle has increased substantially.

In addition, the range and complexity of contaminants in marine bunker fuel is now such that often only the more sophisticated analysis techniques can identify them. This new facility means that we have the capacity to cope with the increased demand without sacrificing the high levels of customer service we are known for".
